The Golf Performance Studio specializes in individual instruction. When we meet I will ask you about your golf history and what you'd like to accomplish. Through this one-on-one attention we can determine the best course of action to reach your goals.

We will work with the sound fundamentals of the full swing in regard to grip, aim, stance, posture, path, and swing plane. Particular emphasis will be on the qualities of your set-up. The correct starting positions are essential for a dependable, repetitive, efficient swing.

For those who want to lower your scores in a hurry, we will focus on the short game. Putting, chipping, pitching, fairway wedge, and greenside trouble shots make up 75% of your total score. A bad drive makes you crazy and can cost a penalty shot, but the short game is where the scoring is really done.

Video analysis and training aids may be used to enhance your understanding and/or feeling of improvements.

“ I believe all golfers are just one or two key ideas from really enjoying their games more and lowering their scores. If you're hitting the ball at all you're doing something right. My job is to identify and reinforce that which you are doing well and then make the most efficient corrections to your technique that will get you striking the ball better. I work with what you have, not force you to fit a pre-conceived model or method. Your mental approach is also vitally important. At all times we will work with your self-management and psychological approach to golf. ”
